

ROMANTIC LOVE-WRESTLING & KRASS KAYFABE-HEARTBREAKS

Uncle FrizzleBob's Bizarre Komik Kards for Katastrophik Kisses, Emotional Exploits & Sexy Story-Wrestling!

The Laboratory of Vulnerability!

Anziehung = Gegensatz + Komplementarität + Gemeinsame Wunde!

The Contrast Collider

POWER: Force opponent to reveal their character's greatest strength. It instantly triggers your character's worst flaw.
LORE: Attraction is no accident. It's a collision. Strengths and weaknesses must violently clash to create the narrative spark.

The Complementary Crutch

POWER: Attach to a wounded fighter. Their weakness becomes your healing potential, generating +3 Chemistry Tokens.
LORE: You don't complete me, you fix my specific psychological damage. No friction structure? No drama. Just decoration.

The Shared Wound

POWER: Play when both players discard a card. Bind both characters to the exact same past trauma.
LORE: The ultimate resonance point. They suffer the same damage, but developed opposite false survival mechanisms.

The False-Perfect Pair

POWER: Trap Card. Discard any couple that looks 'perfectly matched' on paper. They take 5 Boredom Damage.
LORE: Perfection is the enemy of the Love Epic. If they don't challenge each other existentially, tear up the script.

Choose Your Poison, Pick Your Premise!

Romance ain't feel-good, kid. It's an ethical bloodbath.

Vulnerability Over Perfection

POWER: Discard all your Defense shields. Gain the "True Love" win condition.

LORE: The Contemporary Romance thesis. You cannot be loved until you drop the mask. It's an ethical bloodbath. (Architects Daughter)

HUMBUG!

Forgiveness Over Revenge

POWER: Cancel an enemy's attack, but you must permanently discard your highest-damage weapon.

LORE: The Second-Chance mandate. To rebuild trust, you must abandon the safety of your grudges. (Architects Daughter)

Authenticity Over Facade

POWER: Expose all hidden cards in your opponent's hand. The most embarrassing one becomes their core identity.

LORE: The RomCom imperative. The most embarrassing, pants-down moment is the only honest one. (Architects Daughter)

Rebellion Over Order

POWER: Destroy the current Arena. The lovers survive, but society is discarded.

LORE: Historical and Paranormal law. Individual love over collective expectation. The world burns, the heart beats. (Architects Daughter)

Welcome to the Thunderdomes of Love!

Where modern mammals go to suffer beautifully.

The Contemporary Grind

The RomCom Slapstick

POWER: Convert an opponent's Dignity points into Humor tokens.

LORE: Humor as a valve for the fear of love. Don't use slapstick as decoration—use it to completely expose the character's core flaw.

The Big Misunderstanding

POWER: Block all communication. Can only be resolved by character growth, not a simple text message.

LORE: No artificial drama! True misunderstandings must grow logically out of the characters' false protection mechanisms.

The Comedy Shield

POWER: Ignore all Emotional Damage this turn, but your character makes zero progress toward intimacy.

LORE: Jokes are armor. The witty banter isn't just fun, it's a desperate tactic to avoid being truly perceived.

What the FLUFF?!

What the FLUFF?!

What the FLUFF?!

What the FLUFF?!

Corsets, Curses, and Kinks!

Time, space, and morality are just suggestions here.

The Historical Cage

POWER: Lock a character's actions to "Society Rules". They cannot attack directly.

LORE: Dialogue that sounds historical but hits modern emotional truth. Societal constraint is the physical architecture of the cage.

The Paranormal Taboo

POWER: The player with higher Power must voluntarily reduce their stats to zero to allow the romance to progress.

LORE: Power imbalance requires sacrifice. The stronger entity must intentionally weaken themselves, or it's just a power-fantasy, not a romance.

The Second-Chance Cost

POWER: Resurrect a discarded relationship, but pay double the initial emotional cost.

LORE: The second chance must be more expensive than the first. The characters must risk infinitely more this time.

The Dark Romance Dungeon

POWER: Convert Trauma tokens into Attraction. Highly unstable.

LORE: Sex as a power struggle, healing, or destruction. Morally risky, but legitimate if the trauma is followed to its darkest consequence.

The Heavyweights of Heartbreak! in Komika Axis

Meet the poor bastards stepping into the ring. in Architects Daughter

The Masked Protagonist in Komika Axis

POWER: High competence in the outer world, zero defense in the love arena.

LORE: Hero: Highly competent externally, totally vulnerable in love.
Must learn: "I am enough, even without the mask."

The Love Interest in Architects Daughter

POWER: Perfectly targets the Protagonist's specific psychological wound.

LORE: Complementary perfection. Must have their own wound (fear of commitment, false loyalty) or they are just a prop.

The Blocker (The Safe Choice) in Architects Daughter

POWER: Tempts the Protagonist with safety. Delays the HEA indefinitely.

LORE: The Ex, the Career, the Society. Never a pure villain—they represent the temptation of safety over the terrifying work of true love.

The Mentor / Truth-Teller in Architects Daughter

POWER: Forces a player to read their character's hidden flaw out loud.

LORE: Not just comic relief. They are the mirror, telling the protagonist the brutal truth they desperately refuse to hear.

Tongue-Fu and Subtext Suplexes!

They aren't just talking. They're dismantling each other's souls.

The Flirt Duel

POWER: Both players draw a card. Neither wins completely. Tension increases by +2.
LORE: Rhetorical sparring. Shows intelligence and attraction simultaneously. A power dynamic where neither side surrenders.

The Valid Conflict

POWER: Play when both characters are right. No black-and-white villains allowed.
LORE: The hardest debate to write. Conflict born from colliding, equally legitimate moral values. Nobody is screaming; everyone is bleeding.

The Vulnerable Silence

POWER: Silence all inner monologues. Force characters to rely entirely on physical micro-expressions.
LORE: The moment the fight drops. Fewer words, more pauses. The character stops performing and simply is.

The Grand Gesture Speech

POWER: Expose the opponent's core wound and instantly heal it with exact, terrifying precision.
LORE: No clichés! The speech proves one thing: that you have truly, deeply seen the specific damage of the other person.

The Naked Truth of the Mat!

Physical details are just tools for emotional devastation.

The Power Shift

POWER: Transfer Dominance from one character to the other, creating Vulnerability.

LORE: Erotica rule #1: Show the shift. Dominance to equality to surrender. Physical details are merely tools for emotional truth.

The Barrier Breaker

POWER: Smash one psychological barrier. Immediately replace it with a new emotional vulnerability.

LORE: Erotica rule #2: Break the wall. Intimacy as an act of bravery, a capitulation, a transgression of limits.

The Consequence of Closeness

POWER: After intimacy, generate a massive new internal conflict based on the fear of binding.

LORE: Erotica rule #3: Closeness breeds terror. Intimacy inevitably creates the fear of loss. That fear is your next plot point.

The Erotic Retreat

POWER: The character gains Distance but takes heavy Regret damage.

LORE: Write from vulnerability, not performance. If it's just pornography with a plot, Uncle FrizzleBob disqualifies you.

Environmental Storytelling Sabotage!

The weather is just your feelings, weaponized.

The Intimate Kitchen

POWER: Remove all protective distance. Characters must confront each other's mundane reality.

LORE: The realm of the everyday. No grand ballrooms to hide in, just the terrifying vulnerability of making coffee.

The Palace of Contrasts

POWER: Pit public expectation directly against private desire.

LORE: Architecture as a weapon. The physical space must map the exact tension axis of the relationship.

Seasonal Overheating

POWER: Apply 'Summer' modifier: Maximum intensity, zero patience.

LORE: Spring is hope, winter is isolation, fall is maturity. Summer is pure, suffocating escalation. The weather is your feelings.

Architectural Constraints

POWER: Manifest societal constraints as literal, impassable geography.

LORE: In Historical and Gothic, the house is the enemy. The social rules are built directly into the bricks.

THE TRUBY TORTURE RACK!

Four Acts, Two Black Moments, Infinite Suffering.

ACT I: THE MEET-CUTE COLLISION

POWER: Trigger an inevitable encounter that exploits both characters' core flaws simultaneously.

LORE: Not just cute—fated. This encounter MUST force this specific character to face this specific opponent.

BLACK MOMENT I: THE DOUBT

POWER: Force the characters to question if the emotional risk is worth the inevitable pain.

LORE: The midpoint shift. The realization that continuing this relationship will require destroying their old identity.

BLACK MOMENT II: THE RUIN

POWER: Reactivate the original trauma. The relationship is seemingly destroyed forever.

LORE: The darkest hour. The false protection mechanism fails catastrophically. The trauma is real, and the loss feels permanent.

THE GRAND GESTURE ACTION

POWER: Sacrifice your ego to provide exactly what the other character needs, not what they want.

LORE: Anti-Cliché Rule: Help instead of roses. Silence instead of a speech. Heal the exact wound, nothing else.

Ring the Bell on Your Soul!

A Happy Ending isn't given. It's extracted from your flaws.

The Earned HEA (Happily Ever After)

POWER: Win the game. Can only be played if both core flaws have been actively sacrificed.

LORE: A Happy Ending isn't given, it's extracted from your flaws. It is the dramaturgical reward for learning vulnerability.

The Public Sacrifice

POWER: Destroy your public reputation to prove your private loyalty.

LORE: The external proof of change. You cannot keep your pride and the person. Pick one.

The HFN (Happy For Now)

POWER: A temporary victory. You survive today, but the future remains unwritten.

LORE: Equally valid as an HEA. It doesn't have to be eternal, it just has to be morally earned in this specific moment.

The Private Confession

POWER: Reveal the ultimate truth. Healing begins, but shields are gone forever.

LORE: The internal proof of change. The final barricade falls. The lie is dead, long live the terrifying truth.

Foul Play! The Writer is Cheating!

Throw these cards at hacks who write bad romance!

KayfaBIZARRO!

The Cliché Meet-Cute

POWER: TRAP!

If a meeting could happen to anyone, it means nothing. Discard encounter.

LORE: Slop symptom:

The encounter is cute but arbitrary.
Cure: Derive the meeting entirely from the characters' core flaws.

Magical Redemption

POWER: TRAP!

A kiss does not fix systemic psychological damage.

LORE: Slop symptom:

A physical act resolves a conflict that didn't earn a resolution.
Cure: Every solution must cost something.

The Frictionless Pair

POWER: TRAP!

Zero conflict means zero story. Both players fall asleep.

LORE: Slop symptom:

Both are too competent, too kind, too agreeable.
Cure: Build the Love Map and mash their trigger points!

The 1D Blocker

POWER: TRAP!

If the rival is just there to cause jealousy, the tension is fake.

LORE: Slop symptom:

The Ex is purely a villain.
Cure: The third party needs their own logic and legitimacy, or the choice has no weight.

KayfaBIZARRO!

More Bullshit Penalties!

Stop substituting sunsets for psychological depth!

The Unearned "Always Loved You"

POWER: TRAP! Playing the grand declaration before doing the emotional labor causes instant failure.

LORE: Slop symptom: The declaration is too big, too soon.

Cure: Emotional escalation in microscopic steps. Save the speech for the climax.

Decorative Trauma

POWER: TRAP! Mentioning a dark past once and forgetting it is a storytelling felony.

LORE: Slop symptom: Trauma as romantic backstory jewelry.

Cure: The wound MUST be actively weaponized against them at Black Moment 2.

The Stupid Misunderstanding

POWER: TRAP! If the conflict can be solved with one normal sentence, it's garbage.

LORE: Slop symptom: Artificial silence.

Cure: They cannot communicate because they don't know themselves yet, not because they dropped their phone.

The Stockholm Sunset Slop

POWER: TRAP! Pretty scenery does not excuse toxic, unexamined power dynamics.

LORE: Stop substituting sunsets for psychological depth! Every location must mirror the relationship dynamic, or it gets deleted.

TRASH!

DO BETTER!

FrizzleBob

GW Georg v. Westphalen

The Ghosts in the Machine! The underlying forces rigging the game from the start.

Tension (The Rubber Band)

POWER: Fuel the engine with broken expectations, silence, and misread signals.
LORE: The pull between what they desperately want and what they are terrified to ask for.

CRUEL!

Stakes (The Abyss)

POWER: The wager is everything. Win love, or permanently lose the self.
LORE: If they fail, they don't just stay single. They are condemned to live forever within their own fatal flaw.

TOO REAL!

Revelation (The Unmasking)

POWER: Flip the paradigm. Expose that vulnerability is the ultimate armor.
LORE: The paradigm shift. The realization that exposing the soft underbelly is the only true show of strength.

WTF?

Irony Potential

POWER: Multiply attraction by the exact factor of their absolute incompatibility.
LORE: The cosmic joke. They are drawn to the exact person engineered to destroy their carefully curated bullshit.

CRUEL!

TOO REAL!

The Grand Epic Love Conclusion!

Transcendent forms, baby. It's bigger than all of us.

Stay fluffy!

Mythic Gravity

POWER: Elevate the relationship from a personal crush to a universal human thesis.

LORE: The Love Epic. Two individuals reflecting the universal, mythic hunger for connection against the void.

Stay fluffy!

The Two-Weakness Principle

POWER: Combine two broken things to create an unbreakable structure.

LORE: Neither is whole alone. Their specific weaknesses interlock to create a structure stronger than perfection.

The Core Flaw Overcome

POWER: Transformation achieved. The character can finally exist without their armor.

LORE: The question was never "Will they get together?" It was always "Can they mutate enough to survive the connection?"

Moral Revelation

POWER: The match ends. The Kayfabe drops. The truth remains.

LORE: Truby's logic fulfilled: Moral Revelation → Moral Choice → Consequence. The Happy Ending is the ultimate moral laboratory.
