"This is not a game you play. It's a game you use. Nobody wins. Nobody loses. You'll defend an idea you hated fifteen minutes earlier — because the story needs you to. That's the plan. Stay fluffy."

— Uncle FrizzleBob

1 · Play in 5 minutes

Start Here

KayfaBizarro is a storytelling card game for 1-6 players. You take turns building one shared story, card by card. Each turn, the next player judges. Nobody wins or loses — you make something up together and see where it goes.

Your first round, right now

Deal 3 cards each. Everyone reveals one as their Actor and says who it is. Flip one more card face-up as the Quest: that's the goal the story is heading for. Then take turns adding to the story until you get there. Skip the dice this round. That's the whole game — the rest is just detail.

What you need

Cards — 15-20 KayfaBizarro cards per player, shuffled into one shared pile. Every card can be an Actor, Scene, or Quest.

Two D6 — One Story-Mode Die, one Quest Die. Both stay visible. No dice? DIY papercraft dice, or draw a Story-Mode card.

1-6 People — And a table. No board. No pawns.

The First Cut · optional

Cutting the cards is round zero, not a chore. Pass the scissors around, hold up the weird ones, say their names out loud. By the time the deck's in pieces, you already know it. Whoever isn't holding the scissors reads the rules aloud, or snips the cheat sheet.

2 · Two minutes flat

Setup

Deal the cards, pick your Actors, reveal the Quest — then the first player goes.

Deal

Give 3 secret cards to each player. Two minutes total.

Actors

Each player picks 1 card, reveals it face-up, and runs the Card Ritual (Show it · Spin it · Sell it). This card is your Actor — then draw 1 back, so everyone holds a hand of 3.

Quest

The fluffiest player (you know who) draws a Quest card and runs the Card Ritual, then frames the die — what reaching 6 looks like, what 1 looks like. Quest Die to 1.

Stage

The Stage starts empty. Three Scene slots, all open.

Go

They take the first turn.

The Card Ritual

Whenever someone introduces a new card — an Actor, Scene, or Quest — they run the Ritual. Think: wrestling entrance. Three beats, thirty seconds, in character.

Show it

Point at the card. Show it to everyone — name and picture.
This is who just entered.

Spin it

Spin a quick backstory: what does this card want? Read the Lore (the small text) or invent from the image — colored by your Mode.

Sell it

Don't explain it — sell it. Commit like it's the only real thing in the room. (A card's Power is played as kayfabe, not literally.)

Always

Every card, every time — Actors, Scenes, Quests.

Your Turn

Every turn is the same five beats — in order, in character, out loud. After a round or two it runs by itself.

Draw

Take 1 card from the shared deck. You hold 4 for a moment.

Roll

Roll the Story-Mode Die. Whatever it shows is your tone this turn. Commit.

Play

Put 1 card into the story — onto the Stage, or as your new Actor — and introduce it: Show · Spin · Sell. Back to 3 cards.

Story

Stay in character, stay in your Mode, build on what's on the Stage. A line or two, then hand off — leave the next player something to answer.

Rule

The next player — now King Kayfabian — weighs your story and moves the Quest Die: +2, +1, 0, or -1. Then it's their turn.

You play each story to the next player — they judge it. → overleaf.

King Kayfabian

The King Kayfabian is the player on your left — judge and audience in one. You tell your story to them, and their verdict moves the Quest Die: a hard push (+2), a push (+1), a hold (0), or a twist (-1). Short, in character, and it stands.

The crown changes hands every turn: whoever just judged is the next to be judged. Nobody stays King for more than one verdict — about as long as anyone should be trusted with the job.

The Quest Die

The Quest Die tracks where the arc is — from Setup (1) to Finale (6). You never roll it — only the King moves it, after each story.

	Setup	Establish the world.
	Spark	Something disrupts.
	Pursuit	Stakes grow.
	Trials	Complications mount.
	Ordeal	The hardest moment.
	Finale	It ends. The Quest must resolve.

The King's Verdict

+2	Hard push	Use sparingly — a decisive leap forward.
+1	Push	The default move. Standard progression.
0	Hold	Linger here. Build character, not plot.
-1	Twist	Reframe what just happened.

Note

Drop below 1 and the Quest fails: no Finale, no loot — the collapse is the story. (Yes, even a first-round twist can end it: rare, but fair.) Reach 6 and the next player's turn is the Finale.

The Story-Mode Die

Roll the Story-Mode Die at the start of your turn. Not optional. Commit to it. If the Mode clashes with your story, don't smooth it over — play the clash out loud and let the wrong tone bend the scene. That's your turn.

	Tragic	Loss is real. Push forward anyway.
	Comic	Things go wrong. It's your fault. Play the gap.
	Absurd	The impossible is normal. Don't explain it.
	Heroic	Your Actor is right for this moment. Play the peak.
	Mystical	Something's happening beneath the surface.
	Forbidden	Cross the line the story's been avoiding. Sell it.

The Stage

The Stage is three Scene card slots — the shared reality everyone is playing inside. All three start empty.

Empty slot — Fill it with a Scene card from your hand (Card Ritual, then play).

Stage full (3/3) — Overwrite an existing slot with a yes-and: choose one to discard and replace it.

Actor Switch

Instead of a Scene card, you can play a new Actor in front of you at any time, replacing your current one. Your old Actor exits or becomes a background figure. Switch your voice and posture. The Stage is unchanged. Draw back up to 3.

The Finale

When the Quest Die hits 6, the next player's turn is the Finale turn. Same 5 beats — but the Quest must resolve in the telling. Happy, tragic, absurd — the only rule is: the story ends.

After the Finale

Kayfabulation Loot — Forget gold, collect the experience. Your haul is the kayfabe you fabulated together — the best gags, the honest fails, the epic Blödsinn. Grab pens, scissors and glue and make it. Yours to keep.

Pass it on — Photograph your Kayfabulation Loot and send it to someone who'd argue with you.

Clear — Stage cleared. All Scene cards go to discard.

New Quest — Next player draws a Quest card and runs the full Quest Reveal ritual.

Reset — Quest Die back to 1. New episode begins.

Optional Rules

Safe floor — Add a "never below 1" floor — Quest Fails become impossible. For lighter play.

Staged clearing — After a Finale, roll once. 1-2: clear 1 Scene · 3-4: clear 2 · 5-6: clear all three. Survivors carry history forward.

Trophy rule — Whoever tells the Finale keeps the Quest card. First to 3 wins the session.

Social Calls

Any player can make one — but only after a story has finished, before the next player starts, so nobody breaks the active player's flow. The calls inform the King's ruling; the King has the final say.

KayfaBINGO!

That landed. Pure praise. Active player draws an extra card.

KayfaBOGGLE?

I'm lost. One concrete question. Active player answers in 1-2 sentences, in character.

KayfaBONGO!

A player narrated their Power as a mechanic ("blocks 70%", "+2 damage"). Anyone calls it. Active player restates as story, not transaction ('I hit with everything', not '+2 damage').

BLÖDSINN!

Rule broken: out of character, Scene forgotten, Mode ignored. The King rules. No debate. If upheld: no Quest-Die move — the story stays, you just don't advance.

Timing

Right after the telling, any player can call. The King (already next up) rules — BLÖDSINN! upheld → no Quest-Die move; otherwise +2, +1, 0, or -1 — then takes their turn.

Powers & Cards

Nothing on a card is a rule. A card's Power is a cue — play it as a loose effect in the story, or ignore it. Nothing to track, no exceptions to remember.

Play it as kayfabe, not literally. Turn the Power into something that happens in the story — narrate it in, don't call it out like a stat. Lean on it too hard and it may alienate your fluffy friends — which, now and then, is exactly the point.

Solo Play

KayfaBizarro also plays solo — slower and quieter, one person building the whole story. You're not playing against yourself. You're playing against the situation. You hold three roles: your Actor, the world, and the Resistance — whatever won't simply yield.

Solo Setup

Actor

Place 1 Actor card face up. This is you.

Stage

Open three Scene slots, as always.

Quest

Draw 1 Quest card and set the Quest Die to 3 — mid-range, so it can travel both ways.

Hand

Hold 3 cards from the shared deck.

Trace

Keep paper and pencil to jot each beat.

The Solo Quest Die

Start at 3, move each round. +1 pressure builds (comfortable, evasive). -1 pressure releases (coherent but uncomfortable). Reaches 6 → Finale. Below 1 → Quest Fail. Either way: session ends.

Solo Modes

A · Journal — One card a round, one honest line linking Actor → Stage → Quest. Safe and evasive: +1. Honest and pointed: -1. Catch yourself fudging it → BLÖDSINN! on yourself.

B · Reasoning — Focus & reasoning under pressure. Each card carries a modifier (+1, -2, or a value to solve). You may only narrate once you've solved the card's calculation or met its condition. Guess instead of solve → the session collapses.

C · Solo Adventure — Decision trees, risk, progression. Each Quest offers 2-3 actions; roll 2×D6 vs a bar you set (easy 5+, risky 7+, dangerous 9+, boss 11+). Success → -1 · partial → 0 · failure → +1.

D · Sandbox — Career, conflict, relationship rehearsal. Actor is a real role, Stage your real constraints, Quest the goal. One rule: no ideal outcomes. Every action costs something.

BLÖDSINN! (Solo)

Once per session, call it on yourself the moment you're gaming the system or softening the Quest to duck pressure. Replace all Stage cards, leave the Die, keep going.

Frequently Screamed Questions

Does anyone win?

No. No score, no winner — and at some point someone will defend an idea they hated fifteen minutes earlier, because the story now depends on it.

Who is King Kayfabian — and who moves the Die?

The next player in turn order. After each story they judge: read the impact, rule on BLÖDSINN! if called, move the Quest Die (+2 / +1 / 0 / -1). Then their own turn begins. The role rotates every turn.

What if the Mode doesn't fit my story?

Commit anyway. The clash is the story — play the contradiction, don't re-roll.

Do I have to use a card's Power?

No. A Power is just a cue — use it or ignore it. Nothing to track either way.

Can I call BLÖDSINN! mid-story?

No. Hold every Social Call until the story has finished. The active player's flow comes first.

Do I ever re-roll a die?

No. Roll once and commit. The die isn't luck to dodge — it's the frame you play inside.

How long is a game?

One episode: 20-60 minutes. Stop after one, or reset the Die and start the next.

Glossary

Actor	The card you're playing as right now. Any card can be your Actor — swap it any time.
Kayfabe	The agreement, in pro-wrestling, to treat the staged thing as real. We treat improvisation that way.
Bizarro	The opposite version of the world that explains it anyway.
Kayfabulation	Kayfabe plus confabulation — the bizarre shared reality you build out of the Quest and your stories.
Kayfabulation Loot	What you carry home from a finished Quest: that shared story, made into a keepable record. Not gold.
BLÖDSINN!	The loudest call at the table — out of character, Scene forgotten, or Mode ignored. Anyone yells it; the King rules, no debate. Upheld: no Quest-Die move that turn.
King Kayfabian	The judge on your left. One verdict per story — moves the Quest Die — then the crown moves on. Whoever judges is judged next; nobody is King twice in a row.
Story-Mode Die	Rolled at the start of your turn — it sets your tone: Tragic, Comic, Absurd, Heroic, Mystical or Forbidden. Commit to whatever it shows.
Quest Die	A story compass. The King moves it to track where the arc is — and when it ends.
Card Ritual	The entrance protocol: Show it · Spin it · Sell it. Every card. Every time.
The 21	The 5 seconds before the 10 seconds before the 11

Episode Log

After each Finale or collapse, log the episode in one honest sentence. No evaluation, no conclusion.

The quiet game

Try it on

Solo KayfaBizarro is a quiet way to think a real question through.
Set the Quest to something true, then play it out honestly:

"Should I accept this job offer?"

"What if I escalate this conflict?"

"Which assumptions do I treat as fixed?"

"What would I avoid if nobody was watching?"

Also a good creative-writing warm-up, or a way to test new cards before group play.

Session End

After a Finale or a collapse, write one sentence. No evaluation.
No conclusion.
