

FORGET UTOPIA

Uncle FrizzleBob's KayfaBizarro Komik Kult Kards.

Step inside
the future
that is already finished.

(Read the small print last. They're counting on that.)

KayfaBIZARRO!

THE GLOSSY HORIZON

POWER: Hold up a future so polished the visitor sees their own face in it. Sell the reflection.
LORE: A scale model of tomorrow is easily mistaken for a measurement of it.

THE FINISHED CITY

POWER: Show the destination as already built. No scaffolding, no mud, no maintenance, no Tuesday.
LORE: The render is an argument dressed as a photograph of something that does not yet exist.

THE VANISHING PRESENT

POWER: Make today feel like a waiting room with bad chairs, so the future feels like rescue.
LORE: Re-framing the present as merely an obstacle devalues the only time anyone can actually act in.

BLÖDSINN!

WIDEN!

POWER: Offer the dream. Ask only that they stop looking at the floor and sign.
LORE: Awe and scrutiny use different states of mind, and awe is faster.

The Cure-All Keynote

POWER: Promise that one product retires an entire category of human suffering.
LORE: Recasting complex social problems as neat technical fixes flatters the tool and ignores the politics.

The Roadmap to Eden

POWER: Draw a straight line from now to paradise. Hide the cliffs behind the font.
LORE: Roadmaps present uncertain futures as scheduled milestones, borrowing the authority of a train timetable.

THE MOVING LAUNCH DATE

ALMOST THERE

Q3 2024*6
~~Q3 2024~~
~~2023~~
~~2025~~
 SOON!

POWER: Let salvation slip one quarter, then another. Keep the faith by keeping the date close.
LORE: Breakthroughs said to be a few years away sustain belief precisely by never arriving.

THE PRE-ORDER

POWER: Collect belief up front. Deliver the future on a later invoice, or not at all.
LORE: Trading on anticipation is a practice old enough to have a name: vaporware.

HUMBUG!

The Stage Light

POWER: Aim everything bright and warm. Let the glare do the editing.
LORE: The society of the spectacle dictates that the polished image stands in for and outranks the thing itself.

HUMBUG!

The Standing Ovation

POWER: Reward applause faster than questions. Make doubt feel rude.
LORE: In a charged crowd, social proof makes visible enthusiasm self-reinforcing until the clapping becomes the evidence.

The Hero Demo

POWER: Show the one path that works flawlessly. Call it the way it works.
LORE: A smooth demo predicts almost nothing about a messy real deployment because it only walks the happy path.

The Afterglow

POWER: Send them home shining. The details can wait for a calmer head that never arrives.
LORE: Positive affect at the moment of decision narrows scrutiny—wonder is an excellent place to hide a clause.

The Founder Myth

POWER: Cast one person as the author of tomorrow. Origin story optional, confidence mandatory.
LORE: Charismatic authority rests on belief in the individual, meaning it asks for faith and resists audit by design.

NO REFUNDS!
 ↑
 FUTURE IS NOW-ISH

What the FLUFF?!

The Genius Pass

POWER: Let brilliance excuse the parts that do not add up yet.
LORE: The halo effect allows genius in one domain to be quietly spent as credibility in another.

BELIEVE!

The Unfalsifiable Mission

POWER: Make the goal so large that no particular failure can touch it.
LORE: A mission framed as advancing humanity immunizes itself from the accountability a narrow promise would face.

FUTURE IS NOW-ISH
 BELIEVE!

The Disciple Seat

POWER: Offer the crowd a role: believe loudly, and you belong.
LORE: Shared identity raises the social cost of doubt and turns scrutiny into something close to betrayal.

SYSTEM ERROR

The Velvet Rope

POWER: Make scarcity feel like status.
The line is the product.
LORE: Artificial scarcity reads as value,
and exclusion reads as quality.

The Number You Are

POWER: Hand out a position. Let people defend their place in a queue to nowhere.
LORE: Loss aversion makes people defend their position even when the underlying prospect is poor.

The Referral

POWER: Turn each believer into a recruiter.
Growth disguised as generosity.
LORE: Referral mechanics convert enthusiasm into distribution, making the crowd mistake marketing for sharing.

The Early Access

POWER: Reward the faithful with a slightly nicer waiting room.
LORE: Tiered access grants small status upgrades that feel like progress while the destination stays exactly as far away.

The Eternal Soon

POWER: Keep the payoff one horizon away, always visible, never closer.

LORE: A perpetual soon exploits hyperbolic discounting by keeping the prize psychologically near while practically distant.

The Deferred Self

POWER: Promise the better you arrives bundled with the better thing.

LORE: The future self becomes a product, and the present self is cast as a defect to be upgraded away.

The Spent Now

POWER: Trade a real Tuesday for an imagined someday, on repeat.

LORE: Every hour spent anticipating is an hour not lived—an opportunity cost that compounds invisibly.

The Renewed Vow

POWER: When someday slips, sell the vow again at full price.

LORE: Sustained belief is maintained by re-committing rather than re-evaluating, avoiding the pain of sunk cost.

The Wet Blanket

POWER: Frame every question as a failure of imagination.

LORE: Reframing criticism as small-mindedness discredits the questioner without engaging the question.

The Luddite Label

POWER: Sort skeptics into the past tense. They do not get it yet.

LORE: The modern slur misnames a labor argument about power as an ignorant fear of progress.

The Lonely Question

POWER: Make asking feel like leaving the room. Most people stay.

LORE: The fear of social exclusion is processed like physical pain, making dissent genuinely costly.

The Convert Bonus

POWER: Welcome the doubter back warmly. Belief tastes sweeter after surrender.

LORE: Following the relief of cognitive dissonance, former doubters defend the new belief more strongly than those who never doubted.

The Warm Bath

POWER: Lower the pulse. Optimism as a sedative, dosed in keynotes.
LORE: A hopeful pitch amplifies our natural optimism bias into comfortable, paralyzed inaction.

The California Ideology

POWER: Fuse rebel optimism with market faith until questioning either feels like questioning freedom.
LORE: Treating technological progress as inherently liberating smoothly conceals who actually wins and loses.

The Numbed Hand

POWER: Comfort so complete that nobody reaches for the wheel.
LORE: Reassurance that progress is automatic reduces the felt need to act; agency becomes optional.

The Sweet Stall

POWER: Keep them hopeful, seated, and exactly where you left them.
LORE: When optimism is detached from action, it functions solely to maintain the status quo.

WAKE GW Georg v. Westphalen

The Beautiful Mockup

Mind The Gap

POWER: Present the picture of the thing as the thing.

LORE: The mind treats vivid representation as proxy evidence of reality.

The Prototype Loop

KayfaBIZARRO!

POWER: Show the same working corner from forty angles. Imply the whole.

LORE: Repeated exposure to a single polished fragment makes it feel like a finished system.

NOTHING TO SEE HERE

LULLABY LIES!

The Missing Receipt

POWER: Skip the part where it survived contact with a real week.

LORE: The absent record of ordinary operation is always the most important missing document.

The Vibes Audit

THE GREAT ILLUSION.

POWER: Let the feeling of progress stand in for the measurement of it.

LORE: When momentum is conveyed through tone rather than metrics, the feeling arrives first and satisfies.

NOTHING TO SEE HERE

LULLABY LIES!

The Smooth Surface

POWER: Promise a life with no edges, no effort, no callus.
LORE: The easiest option steadily wins not because it is best, but because it asks the least.

The Outsourced Limb

POWER: Let the device do the reaching. Keep the hand on the glass.
LORE: Skills offloaded to tools erode through disuse—a documented trade of capability for ease.

The Forgotten Muscle

POWER: What you never lift, you slowly cannot.
LORE: Frictionlessness has a hidden long-term cost paid in lost ability through disuse atrophy.

The Comfort Trap

POWER: Sell ease so total it quietly removes the option of effort.
LORE: When the effortful path is engineered away, a life optimized for comfort loses access to the difficulty that builds skill.

"Stay fluffy!"

FAKE IT 'TIL YOU BREAK IT!
 LULLABY LIES

LULLABY LIES!

LULLABY LIES

WAKE UP?!

GW

Georg v. Westphalen

The Next Version

POWER: Frame every problem as a thing the next release will fix.
LORE: Defining progress as the next product keeps attention on acquisition and off of repair.

The Trade-In

POWER: Make replacement feel like growth. Discard the old, including the lesson.
LORE: Planned obsolescence designs products to be replaced rather than maintained.

The Treadmill

POWER: Movement without arrival, billed monthly.
LORE: Due to hedonic adaptation, each upgrade delivers a brief lift before resetting the wanting.

The Loyalty Tier

POWER: Reward staying on the treadmill with a faster treadmill.
LORE: Loyalty systems convert repeat consumption into identity, masking escalation as belonging.

The Mortgaged Now

POWER: Borrow against today to furnish a tomorrow that ships late.
LORE: Continually deferring satisfaction spends the present as a means, never an end.

The Patience Tax

POWER: Charge attention as rent on a building with no keys.
LORE: Attention spent on anticipation is a finite resource drained without return.

The Unlived Week

POWER: Add up the Tuesdays spent in the waiting room.
LORE: The cost of perpetual anticipation is invisible because it is paid in ordinary, un-itemized hours.

The Polite Bill

POWER: Present the total gently, after the lights are warm and the doubt is gone.
LORE: Costs disclosed amid positive affect at the close of a pitch receive the least scrutiny.

FAKE IT
TIL YHL
YOU
BREAK IT!

NO ESCAPE!

WAKE UP?!

UPGRADE
OR DIE!

KAYFA
BOGGLE!

HUMBUG!
DO NOT DISTURB!

NOTHING TO
SEE HERE

The Seamless Surface

POWER: Remove every visible seam, so the labor and the trade-offs disappear. LORE: Hiding the seams of a system hides its workings, leaving users unable to contest what they use.

The Closed Loop

POWER: Leave no room for a question. If you cannot ask, you are inside the pitch. LORE: A presentation that absorbs every objection in advance leaves no opening for genuine inquiry.

The Single Story

POWER: Offer one path forward and call it the future. LORE: When only one route is presented, a manufactured choice is being disguised as an inevitability.

The Shine Test

POWER: The shinier it is, the harder you should look for the floor. LORE: Sufficiently advanced presentation acts like magic, and magic works precisely by hiding the mechanism.

WAKE UP?!

NO
ESCAPE!

FAKE IT 'TIL YOU
BREAK IT!

LULLABY
LIES

NOTHING TO
SEE HERE

GW

Georg v. Westphalen

The Assumption Stack

POWER: Name every quiet if the promise stands on.

LORE: Surfacing the load-bearing ifs a pitch keeps hidden is the core of a pre-mortem audit.

The Load-Bearing Lie

POWER: Find the one assumption that, if false, drops the whole roof.

LORE: Identifying the single most fragile assumption tells you more than admiring the finished facade ever could.

The Beneficiary

POWER: Ask who is already paid whether or not tomorrow arrives.

LORE: Many who sell a future are compensated on the promise rather than the delivery; for them, arrival is optional.

THE CORE QUESTION

POWER: Hold the brochure up to the light. Count the things that have to be true. Notice how many are not.

LORE: A promise is only as sound as its hidden assumptions.

Forget Utopia. Stay fluffy!

NO MORE IFS!

CRASH!

WAKE UP!

WAKE UP!

GW

Georg v. Westphalen